Did you know

It is important the food packaging and leftover food is stored safely in case an environmental health officer needs the items for further investigation.

If you have the food label or package:

1. Keep in a dry, secure area where the items will not be damaged or accidentally thrown out.
2. Do not store the label or package next to any other food that may come into contact with it and contaminate it.

If you have leftover food:

1. Keep the food in the original packaging (if available)
2. Place in a dry, food safe container that you can tightly seal
3. Store the leftover food either in the cupboard, fridge or freezer depending on the food.
  - a. If the product is usually stored in the freezer, for example an ice-cream, then you should store any left-over in the freezer.
  - b. If the product is a perishable item, for example chicken curry, then store this in the fridge.
  - c. If the product is a dried good, for example a biscuit, then store this in the cupboard.
4. Keep the food in a secure area where the food will not be damaged or accidentally thrown out
5. Do not store the leftover food next to any other food that may come into contact with it and contaminate it
